

The purpose of paying for an unlisted number is to eliminate unwanted calls (telemarketers included). Indiana's Telephone privacy law, paid for by tax dollars, is to eliminate unwanted telemarketers calls. Since signing up with the state, the calls have been 99% eliminated. It's a pleasure not to receive unwanted calls at 7am or 9pm anymore. Before the privacy law, I had one telemarketer actually find me at work after I refused to talk to them on the phone at home. How did they get my work number?? Who sold it to them?? Where are the consumers rights to privacy??
